The Falls of the Ohio Foundation is pleased to announce the successful conclusion of its search for a new Executive Director. Following a comprehensive selection process, the Board of Directors has appointed Aimee Conrad-Hill to lead the Foundation into its next chapter of growth and impact. Aimee will officially assume the role on March 31, 2025.

The search for a new Executive Director was guided by the Foundation's commitment to securing a visionary leader who will advance its mission to inspire a sense of wonder in the Falls of the Ohio Region. Over the past several months, the Board conducted a rigorous and thoughtful recruitment process, evaluating candidates from diverse backgrounds with strong experience in nonprofit leadership, fundraising, and community engagement. This effort ensured that the next leader would be well-equipped to build upon the Foundation's recent successes.

The Foundation is excited to welcome Aimee and looks forward to the fresh perspectives and leadership she will bring to the organization. "This is a dream opportunity!" said Aimee Conrad-Hill. "This is an incredible opportunity to contribute to the stewardship of one of the most remarkable natural landmarks in the region. I look forward to working alongside the talented staff and dedicated supporters of the foundation to build on its rich history and create new opportunities for engagement and preservation."

"We appreciate the support that The Falls of the Ohio Foundation provides for Falls of the Ohio State Park, and we look forward to continuing that strong partnership into the future with Aimee as the new Executive Director of the Foundation," said Jake Shapley, Indiana State Parks Property Manager at Falls of the Ohio and Charlestown state parks.

Aimee resides in Southern Indiana with her husband and two daughters. She has had a long career in nonprofit fundraising, growth, and consulting and is an active volunteer with several community organizations. Aimee states: "This region is experiencing a lot of growth in our nature-based areas, and the Falls of the Ohio has grown tremendously under Kenton Wooden's leadership. I am excited to take on the role of Executive Director at this pivotal moment for the Falls of the Ohio Foundation," continued Aimee Conrad-Hill. "The potential for growth and expansion is tremendous. I look forward to collaborating with our staff, board, and community to enhance the foundation's programs, connect with new audiences, and ensure that the Falls of Ohio remains a cherished asset in our community for generations to come."
